FINANCIAL PLANNING DURING DIVORCE

A divorce can affect all aspects of your life, not just your family relationships. Seeking expert advice can help you to form a settlement in the early stages, and focus on the longer-term financial implications of a separation.

A separation or divorce can be an incredibly emotional time for you and your family, and untangling your finances during this period can be a difficult process.

From tax considerations, protection, mortgages and pensions, there are a host of complex areas to think about at an already strenuous time, and so seeking expert advice is key.

An Independent Financial Adviser can help to ensure you have plans in place to navigate through this process and to help you adjust to life after divorce.

Integrity365's Independent Financial Advisers are here to assist and support you through every stage, understanding your own unique circumstances.

FINANCIAL PLANNING AT DIVORCE CHECKLIST

Your 9-point checklist of key financial considerations at divorce to get you started in your own planning...

Assets

A major part of divorce is the division of assets, so understanding what you had as a couple and what you will have after divorce is key in planning for your financial future.

Budgeting

There may be many things to fund and budget for throughout the divorce process, such as professional advice from solicitors and/or financial planners.

Children

If you are a parent, it is always a good idea to make arrangements for parenting plans, child maintenance and even education costs as early as you can to ensure a smooth as possible transition for the whole family.

Debts

Consider any debts or liabilities you have that may carry forward, and whose name these are in. This can include things such as personal loans, car finance, mortgages etc.
